

Loudoun Business-Education Collaborative
Friday, June 20, 2008 7:30 AM – 10:00 AM
Rehau North America, Leesburg, VA

Demographic changes on the horizon will radically alter the availability of labor and challenge employers and educators to more efficiently match workforce skills to employer needs:

How will we, as a community, address those changes now to best prepare for the future?

“Working with governors and educators, business leaders can create a continuous feedback loop to foster the creation of flexible and responsive education and training systems. The only way to close existing workforce gaps and prepare for future needs is to align curriculums and certifications with the needs of business, placing particular emphasis on growing industry sectors and career clusters.”

- “Innovation America: A Public-Private Partnership” U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Institute for a Competitive Workforce, Fall 2007

We appreciate your attendance at the Loudoun Business-Education Collaborative as a first step toward building such a public-private partnership. Your participation contributes to the enhancement of our local community, workforce, economy, and ultimately builds upon competitive advantages and quality of place for the prosperity of our generation and the next.